

Peter Wong QC

Peter Wong is a lawyer with Caron and Partners LLP, a mid-sized firm in Calgary, Alberta. Called to the Bar in Alberta in 1984, he has practiced almost exclusively in immigration law and related areas since 1990. He graduated from Queen's University Law School in Kingston, Ontario in 1983. He received his Queen's Counsel designation from the Province of Alberta in 2002.

Included in his areas of practice in immigration are: foreign worker applications, NAFTA Professional, labour market opinions, other type of work permit exemptions, federal skilled workers, Canadian Experience Class applications, Alberta Provincial Nominations, humanitarian and compassionate applications, family class sponsorship, Immigration Appeal Division cases, Federal Court Judicial Reviews, and Citizenship cases. Practicing in these diverse types of immigration applications provides him with a broad perspective on the different types of processes that are available to find solutions to client issues, which is at the core of his daily practice. He has a diverse client base of Chinese, Indian, Japanese, European, and other nationalities all of whom make life interesting for him. He also has a corporate immigration practice in addition to the communities that he serves.

He has devoted his extra-curricular energies to raising the profile of immigrants in the community as a founder of the Immigrants of Distinction Awards in Calgary, practicing martial arts, tennis and distance running. He has written articles for the Canadian Bar Association Immigration Section, and been an editor for the Canadian Encyclopedic Digest (Carswell) which is publishing a new update on their Immigration and Refugee Section. He is a regular contributor to the Listserv to help fellow practitioners in the area.

He practices with Jean Munn, and other lawyers at the firm who practice in immigration and refugee law.
